Money Magazine in April 2010 published a comprehensive article on how to plan for long-term care, including what to look for in long-term-care insurance.

Connie Golleher of The Holleman Companies was one of the experts this national magazine turned to for advice.

She said to make sure that your agent places you with a rock-solid insurance company with years of experience in long-term-care insurance.

“That to me says they are committed to the product and have a history of claims experience,” she told Money.

Money also featured a graph on how a policy’s inflation protection feature works over the years. Connie gave the magazine the statistical analysis behind the graph, called “Get inflation protection.”
